

Sunday February 12, 1888 29:1

IN THE MAGDALEN'S HOME.

NELLIE ELY'S VISIT TO AN INSTITUTION FOR EXPUGNATE WOMEN.

A Wicked Girl's Chances for Reformation—How Poor Creatures Abuse a Noble Charity—Matron Burr's Experience—The Girl Who Befooled an Unlucky Captain—The Toboggan Slide of Sin.

"They do marry, then?" I asked.
"Oh, yes. That girl was in here for six months and when she went out she fell in with bad company again. While intoxicated, she met another girl who tried to induce her to go to some place. She replied that she was bad enough and she would not get any worse. The other girl taunted her, had been persuading her to go to this place, said, 'The Florence Mission is the place for you' and took her there. Just think of a bad girl taking any one to a mission! Well, the girl got converted, and to-night she is marrying a very good man. I will see if I can get you a room for to-night, and by morning you will know whether you want to stay or not."

The thought was forced upon me by an incident which I witnessed in the street: Do women who have started thoroughly on the downward path ever reform?

I could recall hundreds of cases where men had been pointed out to me as having "once been wild, but had now reformed," but I could not remember an instance of a woman spoken of as reformed. As one thought comes in her, I began to speculate on a woman's chances of reforming. I must confess I could not see many, but I knew that in New York there were some institutions devoted to the good cause. I made inquiries and I learned of several among them one that had been in operation for fifty-four years. I immediately decided to learn more about it. I alighted to the New York Magdalene Benevolent Home, No. 7 East Eighty-eighth street.

Dressed to suit the character I wished to represent, I went late one evening to East Eighty-eighth street. I saw an old-fashioned building surrounded by a high brick wall, and I knew without looking for the number that it was the institution I wanted. The wall looked very formidable, and I felt rather homesick as I gave a strong pull at the bell-knob. I answered slightly, as I thought they must surely have a big brutal doorkeeper, and I wondered if I could ever get out when once inside. It is not so difficult as it may appear, that being locked up of one's own accord without a surety as to how long it may last.

ENTERING THE HOME.

I heard footsteps. A chain rattled heavily against the gates; a key was turned, and before me, candle in hand, stood a meek-looking, little, bent woman. She viewed me curiously, and I recovered from my amazement enough to say:

"Is this the Magdalene Home?"

"Yes," she answered, still holding the gate but not offering me admittance.

"Well, I came to see if I could stay a few days," I stammered.

"We don't take any one in here for a few days. They must stay six months. But you had better come in and see," she said, nothing my disapproving look.

I stepped inside and waited until she bolted and barred the gate; then I followed her up the steps into the house. She set the candle on a table in the hall, and knocking on a door, told me to enter. A woman and a man occupied the room, and the former rose and came towards me.

"Are you the matron?" I asked.

"No, the matron is out. I act in her absence," she replied.

"I want to see if I can stay here awhile," I said gatherer.

"Every one who comes here stays for six months," she answered. "There are other homes you can go to for a shorter time."

"This matron is a good while," I said, desirous not to hear anything about other homes.

"It is not very long to those who really wish to reform. Have you been doing wrong?"

"Well, I thought it might do me good to get out of the city a while," I answered, non-committal.

"You know, I suppose, that we have here only drunkards and those who have sinned? You would know girls in such for you to be among them, if you have done enough to merit it."

I began to think that for once I had failed in my attempt to guess the character I wished to represent. I had even put whiskey on my coat to conceal the suspicion that the color of my nose was due to the weather.

For Fannie is just as well for one to flee from punishment. I stammered by way of explanation, which caused me to sit down.

"We think six months is short enough time for people to meet off from old associates and form new habits. Those that come here know what is intended and those sent by parents or judges are kept whether they want it or not."

"Do they always reform?" I asked.

"No, very seldom, I am sorry to say. They sometime and what they did not know before others sometimes."

"Any one can come here?" I asked.

"Yes, any girl who wishes to reform can come here and after she tells her story and it is decided that she is fit inmate for the Home she remains for six months. Clothing and food are furnished free to all. We give them every chance to do right. It is a very discouraging work though. I have spent years at it and I find we make very few, indeed the very fewest reformations. If you do not think you would like to stay six months you can stay any way to-night and have a talk with the matron, Mrs. Burr, in the morning. She went to the Florence Mission to-night to attend the wedding of one of our girls."

"They do marry, then?" I said.

"Oh, yes. That girl was in here for six months and when she went out she fell in with bad company again. While intoxicated, she met another girl who tried to induce her to go to some place. She replied that she was bad enough and she would not get any worse. The other girl taunted her, had been persuading her to go to this place, said, 'The Florence Mission is the place for you' and took her there. Just think of a bad girl taking any one to a mission! Well, the girl got converted, and to-night she is marrying a very good man. I will see if I can get you a room for to-night, and by morning you will know whether you want to stay or not."

The girl went into the hall, and I could hear her talking with the little jailer who admitted me. I thought the girl had taken a drink to me, and was trying that I be sent elsewhere. At any rate, they talked a long while, and I began to feel weary. Again the bell rang, and I heard them say:

"What did you come back for?"

"I didn't like the place," said the new-comer. "It was in the country, so I wouldn't stay," and then they told her what bed to take, and I heard her go heavily up the uncarpeted stairs. Once more the bell sounded, and this time greatings were exchanged. The door opened and a very pretty girl, slightly tanned, came in. She greeted me with a smile as she said: "Good evening" and then sat down on the sofa beside me. It was the matron, she rather urged me to sit, for why I wanted to come in the home, but I replied that I would rather not speak on that subject yet.

"What you tell me, my dear, no one else ever hears, but we must know your history before we can say you are fit subjects for the home; otherwise you get a good education and learn more wickedness than you can ever forget."

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.

"Well, they will let you in, yes and want to know, 'you are bad, will you tell us all there is the first thing?'" But if a girl really wishes to reform we give her every opportunity.

"I am not certain to meet all these girls; I asked, to avoid discussing the first person singular.